WPSA Turkish Branch
Branch Development Report

1. Our Branch website was updated both in the Turkish and English versions.

2. In order to increase interest in our branch Prof. Dr. Erol Şengör gave a conference at Ankara University on the importance of poultry meat and eggs and enlightened the audience about the activities of our branch and the relevance it holds in the poultry sector.

3. Members from the Ankara University Alumni Association visited the Beypi integrated poultry plant. Among the 40 visitors to the plant were very influential alumni from many different professions who have clout in their respective areas. This was a vital opportunity to inform them about many misconceptions regarding the poultry sector and poultry products.

4. A master’s student from Ege University Agricultural Faculty Serdar Yıldırım Aydın gave a seminar about “Incubation Temperature and Leg Problems in Broilers”. This was held with the expectation that it would increase further interest in the subject and improve the student’s public speaking skills.

5. During the National Poultry Congress held in Niğde, three high level officials from the Ministry of Food, Agriculture and Livestock were invited and they could gain insight into the workings of our branch and WPSA in general.

6. The most important presentations of the EPC 2018 conference held in Dubrovnik this September were translated into Turkish and presented to the Ankara Poultry Research Institute. These were disseminated to interested parties.

The total cost of the activities was US $2000.00.
